FLETCHER '24, AND EMERY '23, HELP TO ORIGINATE SPORT

Middlebury Graduates Rally to Harvard's Aid With Novel Team

WILL RACE YALE ON TANDEM BICYCLES

Daily Practice of Team Stops Traffic in Staid Old Boston

Middlebury students have always worked unceasingly for the honor of their Alma Mater, both at college and after they leave here. The latest report of any such efforts recently came to the attention of the CAMPUS in a special despatch from the Boston Post.

Two well-known men at Middlebury who are now doing graduate work at Harvard have gained notoriety for themselves and credit for their college by discovering a new sport by which they believe that Harvard will be able to prove herself superior to her ancient rival at New London.

These men, Paris Fletcher '24, who will be remembered as a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, and also as a tennis and hockey start for the Black Panther, and James Emory '23, a member of Kappa Delta Rho fraternity and a well-known figure on the campus, have entered into their graduate work at Harvard in a manner which makes Middlebury exceedingly proud of her sons. The following despatch tells of their startling and promising discoverey:

"A new variety of athletics is being introduced at Harvard.

"As a result of the long series of athletic defeats which the Crimson has been undergoing at the hands of Yale, students have been endeavoring to discover some kind of athletic activity at which the Crimson might prove it-

R. L. RICE '26, IS GIVEN "ALL STATE" GUARD POSITION

"Shorty" Awarded Place In Recognition of Season's Scoring

In recognition of his unusually high scoring record as a guard, as well as for his brilliant defensive play, "Shorty" Rice was awarded a place on the "All Vermont" collegiate basketball team, announcement of which was made following the Vermont-Boston University game, which concluded the current State basketball season last week. This mythical team is picked annually by officials and experts who have followed the State games. Their 1925 selection is as follows:

"All Vermont" Team

Yarnall, Vermont	Forward
Post, Vermont	Forward
Nichols, Norwich	Center
R. Rice, Middlebury	Guard
Cayward, Vermont	Guard

"Shorty" Rice, as a result of his consistent scoring in the Middlebury-B. U. game, captured the high scoring honors of the team for the season, passing Captain Hollquist, who had been leading him by a few points, up to that game. Rice's 1925 scoring record is: Field goals 46; fouls 27, and total points scored, 119.

"Tommy" Jacobs' Turban Causes Much Comment

In connection with the widespread publicity resulting to Middlebury for the recent participation of the Glee Club in the intercollegiate musical contest in Carnegie Hall, New York, it is interesting to note the following article clipped from the columns of the New York Sun:

"Thomas Jacobs, one of a family that includes members of the ministry of the Maharajah of Cochin, India, will sing in the ninth annual intercollegiate contest at Carnegie Hall tonight as a member of the Middlebury Glee Club. His uncle is Minister of Education in the State of Cochin. The family are members of the Syrian Christian Community and belong to the Marthomas Church, traditionally founded by St. Thomas in the first century.

"Mr. Jacobs lives in Calcutta. He served with the British troops in Mesopotamia during the world war and later was a Y. M. C. A. secretary in India."

BASEBALL MATERIAL IS SHOWING UP WELL

Outfield Position Seems the Hardest Hit; Good Pitchers Trying Out

By PAUL WOLFSKEHL, JR.

While winter lifted several days last week Captain Papke had a chance to look over some of his new material. Working the men in batting practice and in the field a fair idea could be gained of the material.

Although Hasting has graduated and his loss is felt in the box there are several promising newcomers to take his place. Chief among there are Crawford, Whittemore, Simmons and Maynard. Crawford seems to have a hard ball to hit throwing the ball with a side arm delivery. Whittemore with the advantage of being tall and rangy has indications of a good fast ball with plenty of curves. Simmons and Maynard also have a good assortment of curves and should make a strong bid for positions on the team. Another addition to the try-outs is Ferry, a Southpaw, the only one on the squad.

Papke has had several men to try for the infield positions although every one of last year's regulars are still eligible to play. At first base Furbush and McCann have displayed some talent. The former seems to be one of the best hitters of the candidates, a thing that the team can use at any time. McCann appears rather inexperienced but should improve as the season approaches. Collins at third base handles himself well but will have to show something in the hitting line to take the position from Conley who held it down last year.

The outfield seems hardest hit of any of the positions and with Klevenow expected to work a good share of the time in the box there remains but Novotny to hold down right field. However Banks, a member of last year's squad should be able to cover one position with several men to pick for the other. The most likely among the e are R. Rice, Marchukitus, Comiskey and Hollquist. As Morey needs a hard hitting outfielder it is likely that one of these men may draw a berth on the varsity.

Twenty couples were present at an informal dance held in the Pi Beta Phi rooms last Saturday night. Conley '26, piano and Gruggel '26, banjo furnished music for the dancers who were chaperoned by Mrs. Julian Moreno-Lacalle and Mrs. Arthur M. Brown.

MAINE TRIO WILL APPEAR ON LOCAL PLATFORM MAR. 19

Blue to Encounter Stiff Opposition in First Home Debate of the Year

The first intercollegiate debate of the season on the home platform will be held tomorrow evening in the Mead Memorial Chapel at eight o'clock when the affirmative team of the University of Maine meets Middlebury. As in all the other debates this season the question will be "Resolved' That Congress should have the power to pass a measure over the veto of the Supreme Court by a two-thirds vote.' The Middlebury team which has been picked for this debate is made up of Malcolm T. T. Anderson '25, captain, Adrian C. Leiby '25, and William T. Hade '26.

There has been an unusual amount of interest in debating shown this season at Middlebury as has been the case in all the other New England Colleges and it is hoped that this interest will be evidenced by a large crowd at this debate. At Tufts last week the Middlebury men spoke before an audience which filled every available seat in the large Goddard Chapel.

The Maine debate promises to be a most interesting one. The men from Orono have already discussed this same question with New Hampshire and Rhode Island State, winning over the latter. The team which meets the Blue is to meet Vermont at Burlington on Friday evening. Their schedule also includes contests with M. I. T., Clark, Mass. Aggies and Colby. The team which is to speak here tomorrow night is made up of S. Dale Zysman '25, of Brooklyn, John S. Behringer '25, of Elmhurst, N. Y., and Harold L. Ballou '26, of Greenfield, Mass. All but Ballou are experienced men while Zysman is a football letter man.

Middlebury's team in this debate includes two men who have had previous experience in intercollegiate debates. Anderson made an exceptionally good showing in the debates with M. A. C. and Springfield two weeks ago. Hade took part in three debates last year and has twice been a prize winner in speaking contests. Leiby has not participated in a debate before but is an experienced speaker with an especially keen sense of humor.

Each speaker is to talk for fifteen minutes dividing his time between constructive argument and rebuttal as he sees fit. The first speaker on the affirmative team may use as much of his time as he wishes over half in his initial speech and the remainder in a rebuttal speech at the close of the debate.

The next debate will be Wednesday, March 25 when the University of Vermont orators appear in the chapel in an endeavor to gain a third successive victory over the sons of Gamaliel Painter. The strongest available team will be pitted against them however and every effort will be made to establish the Blue's supremacy over her old rivals in the intellectual sport. The Vermont team which is to appear here lost a unanimous decision last week to the same St. Michael's team that defeated Middlebury earlier in the season 2 to 1. The Green and Gold will propound the merits of the affirmative case against a trio that will probably be composed of Cooley '25, Anderson '25 and Hawthorne '26, three Blue's ablest forensic artists.

Many Famous Men at Fraternity Banquet

According to a communication received by the Campus the Eighth Annual Interfraternity Banquet was held in the Ball Room of the Drake Hotel, Chicago, on February 11, 1925. There were many men of national prominence in attendance. Among the most well-known men were Donald B. MacMillan, the famous Arctic explorer and a member of Theta Delta Chi; George "G" Huff, the well-known authority on athletics at the University of Illinois, a member of Kappa Sigma; Dean Wilkins of the University of Chicago, a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, and many others. The large number present, nearly a thousand, indicates the strong attachment which a college man's fraternity has for him. A large cup was presented to the fraternity having the largest number of its members present. Middlebury fraternities represented were Delta Kappa Epsilon, Chi Psi, Delta Upsilon, and Kappa Delta Rho.

"MARCH HARES" IS WELL UNDER WAY

Attention Called to Weekly Meetings of Drama Club at Playhouse

Starting today the cast will rehearse the second act of "March Hares," the April production of the Dramatic Club. The first act has been carefully done scene by scene and the cast is now thoroughly familiar with their parts.

It is expected that the entire three acts will have been covered before the Easter vacation. P. W. Ward '25, who is coaching the production will remain here during the recess and see to the finishing of the sets to be used. When the college reconvenes it will be possible to rehearse with regular sets and property.

Attention is called to the weekly meetings of the club at the Playhouse on Weybridge street at which time one-act plays are presented under student direction. Each performance is given with as much care and precision as though it were a public performance. The plays are put on with the usual lights, costumes, properties and make-up. The only requirement necessary for those who wish to be part of the audience is that they must be members of the Dramatic Club. Persons interested may join at the door or see Prof. Frank W. Cady in Chemistry building.

Alpha Sigma Phi and Kappa Delta Rho gave an informal dance for twenty-four couples at the K. D. R. house Saturday night. Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Cutting chaperoned the dancers, for whom music was provided by Higgins '28, piano; Montandon '26, saxaphone, and Adams '25, banjo.

Answer to Humorous Error is the Cause of Much Publicity

DEAN E. J. WILEY GETS FEATURED

Letter Sent to "Mr. Painter Hall, Middlebury, Vt.," by Clothiers

Answering a "follow-up" letter addressed to "Mr. Painter Hall, Middlebury, Vt.," which had been turned over to him, Dean Edgar J. Wiley caused the college much favorable publicity at the hands of the advertising man of Rogers Peet Company ,the New York clothiers.

In the New York papers of last Monday, the entire advertisement of this company dealt with Middlebury College and the humorous error of directing a personal letter to the sturdy old landmark erected by the late Hon. Gamaliel Painter. Dean Wiley's clever answer was quoted in full, and at the top appeared the reproduction of Painter Hall. In a letter to the Dean, Mr. A. C. M. Azoy, jr., the Advertising Manager gave the following explanation of how the erroneous letter happened to be written:

"Just how we came to make the ridiculous error in the case of Mr. Painter Hall I do not know, but my supposition is that some student who roomed there got his name on our mailing list and in some way the name itself was lost, merely the address remaining."

We quote the original letter to Mr. Painter Hall below:

February 25, 1925.

Mr. Painter Hall,
Middlebury, Vt.
Dear Sir:—

Haven't seen you for some time. Anything gone wrong that we can set

"They Also Serve—"

We had our attention centered on the gridiron warriors last fall and during the winter months we have been interested in the basketball team. Just before we get all set for an intense period of baseball let us stop to consider a team that has been upholding the forensic honor of Middlebury in the past few weeks.

We do not pay enough attention to the men who labor weeks and devote their afternoons and evenings in order to make a good showing when they match their wits in intercollegiate debate. We are prone to take all too casually the results of their appearance on the platform here and at other colleges. Just what good is debating any way?

It has been pointed out that the country has any amount of "talkers"—those who become intoxicated by the exuberance of their own verbosity. But the number who can talk clearly and forcefully is unfortunately small. Athletics plays an important part in life in that it develops a man's physique and gives him a strong healthy body. But when that man gets out into the business world it will take more than one hundred and ninety pounds of bone and muscle to convince a group of directors that a certain proposition is sound! That requires a man who can stand up on his two feet and without hesitation or embarrassment, clearly and logically argue the question. Someone has said that the day of "spread-eagle oratory" has passed, but that plain and forceful speaking will never pass. Years ago a man upon assuming a public office felt called upon to garrulously announce his principles and policies with much gesturing and ice-water. President Coolidge's inauguration is a good example of how clear speaking is taking its place in public life.

This year debating has taken a forward step in the colleges of Vermont. Middlebury has had a fine schedule this season and has faced some stiff opposition. We have been using a new system, which is an added disadvantage. But despite all handicaps the platform trio has put forth every effort to make a good showing and has done remarkably well.

Tomorrow night they will debate here in their first home appearance. Will they speak to empty seats? Will their opponents return with a report of what poor support debating has at Middlebury? The team can do much better when there is a large audience to speak to. Let's show just as much spirit that night as we have at the basketball games.

We would like to know if there isn't some way in which the walk leading from the lower campus to College street couldn't be fixed? We don't like to carry away gobs of terra firma in our wanderings to and from classes!

A Lost Enthusiasm

There have been many ingenious explanations and excuses for the appalling popularity of slang, some plausible, and some merely amusing. Among them have been mentioned the craze for efficiency which has led to the desire to take short cuts even in our speech to accomplish more in a given space of time, and use brief, expressive language. One of the most recent explanations of the slovenly tendencies of speech now paramount rests on the thesis that it is all the fault of the way English is taught, and the blame is laid at the door of the long suffering teachers of English who have had many missiles hurled at their heads, and evidently are to be given no rest.

A recent article in the "Educational Review" asserts that the teachers of English should sign a declaration of independence, a declaration not to serve as general assistants to almost every other subject in the curriculum, and to every faddish, short-lived ism that may arise "Just why current events should be taught in an English class I have never been able to see. Just why English literature should be called upon to instill ideals of life and good ciizenship and to foster Americanism is equally vague. To teach Macbeth as a tract on the perils of ambition is to prostitute a noble work of art; to put citizenship values, social values, functional values in the vanguard of English interets is, it seems to me, almost if not quite wicked. I am far from sure that this sort of thing has not been largely contributory to the present disrepute of good English with many vigorous, athletic-minded American students. An English teacher should teach English literature and composition first because he loves them and teach that the pupil may love them too. When the pupil has found an enthusiasm for English I have little fear for his expression."

A true enthusiasm for the English language, and an appreciation of its possibilities of beauty and music of sound is rare, if not obsolete among college students. Of late years it has been too much regarded as swiftly vehicle of expression to get our ideas across as swiftly and as well as possible, and we have been far from fussy about what type of vehicle we employed. We admit that the French language is beautiful and musical, and that Spanish and Italian are equally lovely, but when it comes to committing sheer murder with our own, we have no compunction. However, to get the average young gentleman or young lady, self assured, sophisticated, and worldly wise, to "love" the English language for its own sake is asking a great deal of any English teacher Mr. Daniel's point is probably true in so far as the emphasis in many cases is misplaced, but to teach English literature for beauty of style alone leaving out interpretation and the heritage of ideas that it brings would be an even worse breach, and furthermore would be next to an impossibility. Any suggestion made by a teacher about getting to love and revere the English language would alienate a large section of his class; this must be done tactfully so that his motives will not be suspected, and the interest of the text used in the nature of bait!

One of the great factors in preserving the elements of good speech will of course be through community life and standards, whether slovenly and careless speech in speech is frowned upon or smiled on indulgently will determine its use, just as the community standards will govern the care which which its members dress. It might be embarrassing to many college communities if an investigation were held as to where they stand in the line of excellence.

Intercollegiate Glee Club Contest

Amassing a total of 249 3-5 points out of a possible 300 the Yale Glee Club won the fourth annual intercollegiate contest held at Carnegie Hall, New York, March 7. Princeton came second with 223 2-5 points, and the University of Missouri third with 221 points. Fourteen college clubs participated.

Two microphones on the stage broadcasted the entire program. The hall was packed and standing room was sold out even before the singing started.

Should Yale win again next year she would have won for the third consecutive time and the Challenge Cup, now in the custody of the Yale Glee Club, would remain permanently lin her possession.

At the conclusion of the evening all the clubs assembled on the platform to unite in singing Kremser's "Prayer of Thanksgiving." Over five hundred voices joined in this song.

The colleges that competed in the contest were as follows: Amherst, Columbia, Dartmouth, Fordham, Harvard, Middlebury, New York University, University of Missouri, University of Wisconsin, Wesleyan and Yale.

McLaughlin '25, Chosen as Captain of Hockey Team

William J. McLaughlin '26 of Dorchester, Mass., was chosen captain of the hockey team for next season at a meeting of the letter men which was held last Wednesday. "Bill" has been a mainstay of the team for the past three seasons, and is one of the few men in college who has earned letters in three sports. He has twice won the varsity "M" as a football end and last year earned it through his work as a weight-thrower on the track team. He is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Contrast

Resplendent students and guests filed proudly through the archway of trellisses decorated with smilax into the ball room of the Radisson Hotel at Minneapolis for the Junior Ball of 1925. Weeks of preparation had been expended decorating for the occasion. Twenty-six flood lights banked by palms and ferns, splashed brilliantly colored light across the ceiling. Behind a raised dias, where two orchestras were stationed, an ever changing spotlight played on a drape of gold cloth.

But while this ornate and highly expensive ball was in progress over at the Minnesota Union an affair of an entirely different stripe was in progress. The Common People's Ball. This ball is a Minnesota tradition. Tickets for this dance were $1.50 each. The slogan of the ball is "Walk a Flight and Save $11.00." Placards advertising the occasion admonished, "Wear your Own Clothes." And last but not least economy, there were no flowers.

She—"It's very good of you to ask me to dance."

He—"Don't mention it, it's a charity ball." Ex.

PRESIDENT MOODY DELIVERS SUNDAY VESPER SERMON

Declares We Are Our Brothers Keepers; World a Neighbor

President Moody was the Vesper's speaker this week. He took as his texts "Am I my Brother's Keeper" and "Who is my Neighbor?"

"The first question was insincere as Cain coming straight from the murder of his brother asked it of our Lord," began President Moody. "The other question was asked many centuries later by a young lawyer who was reluctant to obey the commands of the disciples. These two questions go far in determining our happiness or unhappiness in life. It is usually selfishness that prompts us to find out who are our neighbors. We like to think of those of our own class, our own group as our neighbors but is this truly comprehensive enough?

"A man who is guilty of any dishonorable act forgets his responsibility to those around him. If he could see himself as a part of a great mass, and if he felt that behind him were his mother and father who had given him an unblemished name, and if he thought of his wife and the future of his children, there would be little temptation to do wrong. The reason the underworld is such an unhappy place is because it is made up of those who have severed all close relationships with the rest of mankind. Here in college we all know that every questionable thing we do brings a certain amount of discredit to Middlebury, to our class, and to our fraternity. A man who realizes his duty to his group cannot be dishonorable nor cowardly. Our actions also affect many outside of our immediate circle. We do not know how far our unconsious influence extends. Surely we are our brother's keeper and the world is our neighbor."

"There is another sense in which we are our brother's keeper—Christ is the brother of all mankind. What a tragedy it would be if Christ had lived and died in vain in the life of any one of us. The realization of Christ's eternal brotherhood will lead us on to unselfishness and service."

Christian Association Hold Regular Weekly Meeting

Middlebury Christian Association of the men's college held its regular weekly meeting Wednesday evening, March 11, in Hepburn Social Hall. The gathering was addressed by its president, Edward Hickcox '27, Proessor Vernon C. Harrington assisted in the services.

A report of the recent Student Friendship drive made on the men's side of the hill showed a very satisactory result considering the size of the present organization.

Several members of the Association are to journey to East Middlebury and to Ripton next Sunday morning to assist in the church services at these places.

President Paul D. Moody will speak before the organization at its next meeting Wednesday, March 18, at seven-thirty in the social hall. All are cordially invited to attend.

Schuller Addresses German Club

At the meeting of the German Club last week the members were entertained by Mr Fritz Schuller '25, who spoke in a very interesting manner on the topic of "School Life in Germany." As Mr. Schuller has had the advantage of attending the schools of Germany during a great part of his life, he was able to give a very vivid impression of the conditions existing in and about the institutions of Germany as compared with those of America. Mr. Iancu Weiss '28, the president of the club, presided at the meeting.

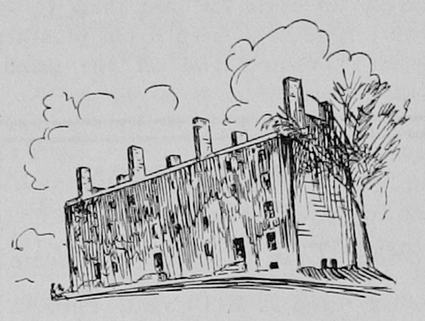
righ? We make good clothes—and we're always ready to "make good" if by any chance the clothes don't!

Won't you let us hear from you? Stamped envelope for your convenience

Yours very truly,
ROGERS PEET COMPANY.

The Campus is taking the liberty of reproducing the advertisement as it appeared in the New York World:



Middlebury this way!

Not long ago our mail order records showed we hadn't heard from "Mr. Painter Hall, Middlebury, Vt.," for some time. So we wrote him, asking why.

We received a reply from the Dean of Middlebury College, which is too good to keep:

"Your letter of Februeary 25th addressed to Mr. Painter Hall has been referred to me as he is now about 110 years old and unable to do any writing.

"You will readily understand that it is not surprising that you have not, as you say, seen him for some time. As a matter of fact Mr. Painter Hall never did travel to any extent and so far as I know he has never been outside of the town limits.

"I have understood that it is the young men who keep the clothing and furnishing business alive, and Mr. Hall, like most of his generation, has little use for new clothes. I doubt whether it is worth your while to keep him on your mailing list, as he will probably buy nothing more as long as he lives, though he is sturdy and remarkably full of life and activity for one of his extreme age.

"He is greatly admired in this section, and while he is not a good prospect for your mailing list I am sure that you will be interested to see his picture which is pasted on the following sheet."

But even if we hadn't made such a mistake and Painter Hall were a real person instead of the oldest college building in Vermont, we would have to disagree with the genial Dean's third paragraph.

A good part of our business is done with young men, but our observation suggests that no man's too old these days to take a proper pride in his appearance. It's no unusual thing for us to have grandfather, son and grandson on our list of customers.

Everything men and boys wear for Spring.

P. S. To Middlebury men—Right now we've some canes which tho' they may not compare with Gamaliel Painter's, are nevertheless worthy of your attention.

DRAMA REVIEW

He Said and She Said

Cast:

Felix Haldeman----Abbott Carney '27
Enid Haldeman-----Marion Swift '26
Diana Chesebrough--Mary Barker '27
Mrs. Packard----Margaret Moody '28

"He said and She Said" is an amusing sketch concerning a village scandal monger and the trouble she caused by repeating what "everybody" said. But for all its amusing situations it reads us a good lecture against letting our neighborliness run away with our tongues. Last Thursday night's production under the direction of Clyde Fussell took advantage of the natural setting of the Playhouse stage and with appropriate furniture, lamps and screens transformed the bare boards into an exceptionally attractive living room. Mr. Carney was good as the conventional husband who couldn't see why a "public announcement" of his love for his wife was necessary. Miss Swift played the part of the wife who was susceptible to the evil tongue of gossip very creditably. Miss Moody was exceptionally good as a typical village gossip, who lived and breathed scandal. Miss Barker gave a fine interpretation of the young woman who was the victim of the tongue-wagging circle and who turned the tables on her persecutors. It seems to us that Miss Barker bids fair to develop into good material for the longer plays of the Dramtic Club, if we can take her performance as an example of her histrionic ability. Mr. Fussell deserves our commendation for the entertaining production and especially for the clever set.

Owing to the sudden illness of the lead in Miss Abel's production it had to be postponed. This little play will be given tomorrow night although there had been no performance scheduled.

J. A. PECK '98 TELLS OF ALUMNI INTEREST IN ADVERTISEMENT

Active Alumnus Sends Original Electro of Famous Painter Hall

According to a story sent to the CAMPUS this morning by Joseph A. Peck of the class of '98, the Middlebury alumni who saw the advertisement were very much interested. It is due to the courtesy and active interest of Mr. Peck that the CAMPUS is able to reproduce the Roger Peet advertisement with the original electro of Painter Hall.

Mr. Peck's article is as follows:

Rogers Peet Company's advertisement in the New York City morning papers on March 16th, reproduced in this issue, naturally aroused much interest among Middlebury Alumni and undergraduates.

Dean Wiley's letter caused great amusement among the executives of the company and the incident was considered well worth reporting.

Major Chas. W. Halsey, president of Rogers Peet Company, remembered hearing the Glee Club sing "Gamaliel Painter's Cane" at the Intercollegiate Glee Club Contest in Carnegie Hall on March 7th, and suggested that Post Script regarding the cane.

Major Halsey learned through the parents of John Walker, a member of the present freshman class, the tradition regarding the cane and the football victories over the University of Vermont. He is a graduate of Princeton University of the class of 1898, is a member of the Graduate Council of Princeton and, being chairman of the Publicity Committee, was keenly alive

Snowmen Features of Tri-Delta Snow Dance

Pines and Snow. This was the decorative scheme carried out at the Annual Formal Dance of Alpha Iota of Delta Delta Delta which was held Saturday night at McCullough Gymnasium. During one dance it snowed profusely and during another the dancing was momentarily interrupted while the dancers pelted each other with snowballs. The room was lighted by four Delta lanterns and a high silver Trident. Six pompous snowmen with jovial expressions reflecting the spirit of the occasion watched the dancers from the stage above. The Chaperones es were Pres. and Mrs. Paul D. Moody, Prof. and Mrs. William S. Burrage, Prof. and Mrs. Frank E. Howard and Dean Ruth M. Temple. Representative were Marion S. Wolcott, Kappa Kappa Gamma; Marjorie E. Winter, Pi Beta Phi; E. Lillian Ranquist, Sigma Kappa; Clara E. Park, Theta Chi Epsilon; Viola S. H. Palmer, Delta Omega Delta, and Marion E. Peterson. Music was furnished by the Barbary Coast Orchestra of Dartmouth College. The committee consited of Mable Benedict, Chairman; Katherine Stockwell, Cleone Comings, Pauline Cross and Louise Covey.

self superior to its redoubtable rival from Connecticut.

"After long months of intensfied research, a group of Harvard graduate students—young men who are greatly interested in the welfare of the Crimson—finally discovered a sport at which they think that Yale can be defeated.

"The new academic revelation was discovered in the musty attic of a second hand store in the South End of Boston. The 'revelation' itself consisted of a pair of shappy, old, second-hand tandem bicycles.

"So the Harvard boys bought the two discarded vehicles, and have decided to challenge Yale to a race. And, since the purchase, they have been taking daily workouts on Massachusetts avenue, just north of Harvard square.

"That is the reason that automobilists and street-car motormen have been held up and somewhat disturbed of late by the appearance of pairs of young men, clad in tuxedo coats, white strached shirts and basketball trousers, sweeping up and down Massachusetts avenue, on old-fashioned tandem bicycles.

"The captain of the Harvard bicycle team has not yet been elected. A special meeting of the entire student body —7000 strong—probably will be held for the purpose. However, the outstanding candidate for the honor in Samuel "Babe" Humes, a former Williams College football star and weight-thrower who is now doing graduate work in the Harvard Law School.

"The reason the Harvard boys feel confident that Yale cannot beat them at this new sport is because they are quite sure that they have possession of all the tandem bicycles in captivity, and that, therefore the Elis won't be able to get any tandems with which to race them."

TUFTS DEBATERS WIN AT MEDFORD

Record Crowd Hears Contest in Which Teams are Very Evenly Matched

The Tufts College Debating team, upholding the negative of the Supreme Court question, were awarded the decision of the judges over the Middlebury debaters, last Friday night at Medford Hillside, Mass. The debate which was held in Goddard Chapel at Tufts College, drew a record crowd for the S. R. O. sign was hung out before the contest had started.

The Blue and White team was composed of Oscar W. Cooley '25, captain; John J. Leary '25, and Dana S. Hawthorne '26. Tufts was represented by Francis H. Russell, James E. Nickerson and Clarence A. Roberts.

Although the Boston team received a 3-0 vote the teams were evenly matched and the conflict was keen on both sides. There was a considerable gathering of Middlebury friends and alumni present. The judges were: Frederick C. Packard, jr., Instructor in Public Speaking at Harvard; Harry M. Varrell, Professor of History at Simmons College, and James A. Winans, Professor of Public Speaking at Dartmouth.

President John A. Cousens of Tufts, presided. After the debate, the Middlebury team was given a reception at the home of Professor N. C. Maynard, who is coaching the Tufts team.

At the regular Y. W. C. A. meeting last Tuesday night discussion groups were held led by Helen Woodworth '26. The audience divided into groups after the introductory presentation of the topic, "Fundamentalists and Modernists in Contemporary Religion," and further discussed it.

Marion Prince '23, is Secretary to the Superintendent of the Street Floor of Filene's in Boston, Mass.

Will Your Children and Theirs go to College?
Do You Know
—that Brown goes back to his twentieth reunion this spring, and that he has just taken out educational insurance?
To this day he doesn't know which parent or aunt or uncle paid most of his school and college bills. But he does know that he can never repay those obligations created, except by insuring ample money for the education of his own two children.
So he has recently arranged endowment policies for both, to mature at the beginning of each school and college year. He believes that his children will more genuinely appreciate their education by paying for it out of their own funds.
And Brown also believes that they will better capitalize their own increased capabilities, on or before graduation, by taking out insurance for the education of the next hoped-for generation, as well as to create an immediate estate and financial guarantee of family unity.
The John Hancock is particularly interested in insuring college men and women and in obtaining college graduates for the personnel of the field staff.

to the interest this episode would have for Middlebury men.

Rogers Peet Company were interested to learn that the composer of "Gamaliel Painter's Cane" was the wife of the author of the letter.

A high compliment was paid the personality of the Dean as reflected in the letter. On the other hand, there has been much favorable comment on the good taste used in preparing the advertisement.

University of Texas Strikes Oil

One American university need not bother with the endowment drives—that is the University of Texas. It is the owner of 2,080,000 acres of land of which more than 100,000 acres are under oil development. Every month $50,000 is turned over to the university as a royalty for the oil produced on its land.

Furthermore, the development is still going on and it may not be long before the university will be receiving $200,000 a month. It is not known how much of the land is oil-bearing as only the 100,000 acre block has been exploited so far.

The money from oil may not be used in the maintenance of the university. Under a bill that was recently passed this revenue is placed to the credit of a holding fund and all will be used in the erection of new buildings and in making improvements about the university grounds.

Almost all of the land owned by the university is leased to ranchmen for grazing purposes. The income from this source nets the university approximately $229,000 a year.

Boosteritis

Much has been said in the columns to the left of "The Windmill" concerning the satus of the college newspaper, all in vain, too, because college administrators still persist in disciplining college editors who will insist upon getting into hot water.

Take a handful of the most recent examples; editor of the University of Dubuque "Blue and White" resigns because it is charged that he did not "support the administration"; President of the University of Indiana rebukes the editor of the "Student" for an editorial dealing with a recent happening in the state legislature; professor at Oberlin refuses to give "copy" to a "Review reporter because the editor did not give his department enough publicity on a previous occasion.

At the root of the whole difficulty lies a false assumption as to the funtion of a college paper. Looking for an analogy in the outside world, some students have drawn a parallel between the college paper and independent newspapers or journals of opinion. This is nonsense. If the editorial policy of the college paper were dictated by the personal whims of each succeeding editor, where would the college be? With the glee clubs and winning football teams drawing students to the college, this one editor by his personal opinions might be undoing all their good work. Suppose for instance, that an editorial appearing in the college paper praising Senator Walsh should fall into the hands of a trustee whose wealth was invested in Standard Oil holdings.....anyone can see the absurdity of it all.

Rather let the comparison be made between the college paper and the "house organ" of some large business concern. Why can't we consider the University a thriving business concern whose "line" is education. The college paper, like any other student activity, exists for the purpose of selling this education to the public. This same business man's attitude is being recognized more and more by college students. Again and again "The New Student" receives letters from students protesting that this or that item will give their college "unfavorable publicity." It is encouraging to reflect that these students are realizing more and more that each bit of news emanating from the college must be judged from the advertising man's point of view, that each editorial must contribute in some way to building up the college's reputation as a reliable place to do business.

Now where stands your editor who insists upon bringing independent intellectual standards into the making of his paper? Can you imagine the editor of "The Tobacco Journal," house organ of the Chu Rite Tobacco Co., refusing to "support the company"? Picture him publishing an article in his paper that was contributed by the Anti-Tobacco League! Preposterous! He would be fired in a hurry. His paper exists for the purpose of breaking down sales resistance and inspiring languid salesmen. Let the college editor go and do likewise. Let him spend his time puzzling out the ways of selling his college. Let his editorials be inspirational, exhorting application to study, denouncing immoral students, people who do not cheer at basketball games, radicals and Freshmen Who Walk On The Grass. That is the proper path for him to follow.

Mexico Seeks Educational Cooperation With U. S.

Mexico wishes for a more general interchange of students and professors with the United States. Due to the necessity of concentrating on an internal education program the Mexican government has not heretofore paid much attention to an educational exchange. However if the necessity of exchanges with the United States the Mexican government is convinced, so affirmed Dr Jose Puig Casaranno, Minister of education, in a recent speech at the Colorado School of Mines. "It is difficult to be enemies with the people that you thoroughly know and trust" he says, and in accordance with this saying, outlines the following program for the development of better international relations.

1. The interchange of students. The Mexican government has pensioned a number of students to continue their studies in the United States. It will take advantage of the offer of twenty scholarships by the Harvard Club of Mexico. It has commissioned Miss Conception Romero James to work in New York to promote the interchange of students.

2. Interchange of Professors. So far the only interchange of this kind is with the University of Texas which desires that Mexican professors lecture at that university and that American professors give lectures in Mexico.

3. Summer Schools. Since 1921 the National University of Mexico has maintained a summer school for students and teachers of the United States. Courses are given in Spanish thus giving students and teachers of that language some real training. There will also be some courses in English.

In addition to courses under Mexican and American professors there wil be visits under the University supervision to world-famed archaeological ruins. The visitors will thus not only familiarize themselves with the Mexican ways of living, customs and life of the country still so full of latin traditions, but also with the ruins of the early inhabitants. This portion of the International Education program is under the supervision of Sir Manuel Romero de Terreros, secretary of the Summer School, Universidad Nacional de Mexico, D. F.

Japanese Students Turn the Other Cheek

On Riverside Drive, New York, near Columbia University, stands the International House where 1200 students from 69 countries live. Of these students 525 represent 53 countires. Living under one roof these students from all over the world participate in the most real sort of international education.

While some of the Japanese students embittered and disheartened by the the United States exclusion law withdrew from the house others are turning the other cheek by staging three Japaneses plays With the proceeds of these plays they hope to establish a scholarship for an American student in a Japanese University. This effort is called "The Brotherhood Scholarship Fund Movement" and it is hoped that $1,500 will be raised to send an American student to Japan for one year.

Chance of a Lifetime

The eighty-pound husband was the defendant and the two-hundred pound wife was the plaintiff.

"And why did you slap your wife's face instead of helping her when the automobile knocked her down?" inquired the judge.

"Well, your honor," replied the diminutive husband, "opportunity knocks but once."—American Legion Weekly.
